GOD SAVE THE KING

Today is circus day.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Higgins are happy in the arrival of a bouncing boy on May 27th. Mrs. Higgins is far from well and Mr. Higgins has returned from Siwft Current.

Much sympathy is expressed with Mr. and Mrs. Angus McLeay in the loss of their infant son on Tuesday evening, aged three weeks. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Corey returned Sunday afternoon from Vancouver, B. C., accompanied by his mother, where they went to attend his father's funeral, who passed suddenly away on Sunday, May 25, in that city. Deceased was known to many in Gleichen, having spent several months visiting his son here and all will join in expressing the most sincere sympathy with the bereaved family in their great loss. The deceased was over 82 years of aged and spent his life as a clergyman of the Baptist church.

There was an interesting meeting of the Gleichen Farmers Union last Saturday afternoon, but the secretary has failed to send in his usual report in time for this issue. However, it is stated a number more subscribers are required for the elevator and members wanting to order binder twine must apply before June 15th.

The boys of the Bank of Commerce intertained a number of their friends at their camps on the Bow river on the King's birthday. All report having spent a royal time.

Between seed time and harvest is a splendid time to fix up the school house and school grounds to make them look a little more cheerful and homelike. Don't forget that your children spend the most impressionable part of their lives in the school house (or ought to) and if it looks like a barn, and feels like a barn and is located like a barn, the children are hardly to be blamed if they don't learn to love the school.

Join the Calgary Green Room Club

The Green Room Club of Calgary is an organization consisting of a large number of well-known residents of that city who are interested in drama and music. They are endeavoring to obtain support for high grade theatrical performances musical entertainments coming to Calgary, thus inducing the very best in this line to include this Province in their tour. Through the patronage that they have been able to provide they have proven an important factor in inducing many of the greatest stars in most notable theatrical productions to arrange for an appearance in Calgary.

In order that out-of-town patrons of the theatre may be kept informed as to the best of these entertainments the Green Room Club will be pleased to place on their mailing list any of our local residents who will send in their names. No charge will be made for the bulletins, and the recipients may feel assured that such attractions as are recommended by the club are of the highest class of metropolitan productions and well worth while making the trip to Calgary to see. Matinees are given every Wednesday afternoon at reduced prices.

The bulletins will describe the play and company and give the dates, prices of seats and other information of interest.

The Green Room Club has no connection with any theatre and the recommendations made are based entirely on the merit of the attraction.

Send in your name and address without delay to

MR. F. T. ANDERSON, Hon. Secty,

Gardening broadens one. There is a sort of brotherhood among gardners. If you are not a gardener now, become one this summer, with pleasure to yourself, your neighbors and friends. Do your share in making the town beautiful.

The little rain in town Tuesday night is reported heavy north and to have result in great good to the farmers.

Word was brought to town yesterday of the death of Mrs. C. H. Smith at Queenstown on Tuesday night.

J. S. Robertson was in town one day last week, and after admitting that the crops were doing well in Queenstown district, said that the little daughter that arrived at his home on May 21st was the most interesting item of news he had. He was also pleased to say Mrs. Robertson and the little girl were doing nicely.

Speaking at the Farmers' Union meeting, Saturday, Chris Anderson said last December his wife had 90 hens and since had sold $160 worth of eggs and had hatched out already this year 280 little chickens. He had never missed the feed and from his experience with poultry, cows, hogs, etc., he was convinced that mixed farming was the best business for farmers in this part. In fact he had no use for the elevator business as he was preparing to feed all he could grow.

CARD OF THANKS

To the friends who came to us in our hour of trouble, and contributed all that human kindness could suggest, to help and comfort, we return most heartfelt thanks, and although such devoted friendship cannot remove the sad memories that linger around our vacant chair it brings into view the brightest side of humanity, and throws the pure light of an unselfish friendship into a darkened home. May the day be far distant when those friends around us need similar attention, but when the time comes may they receive the same full measure of generous aid and tender sympathy they brought to our home when death was an inmate there.

MR. and MRS. MacPHEE.

Champion Pelkey Visits Gleichen

There was much excitement—or should we say curiosity—last Friday evening when it was heralded about town that Arthur Pelkey, the white heavyweight champion of the world, was in Gleichen, accompained by his trainer, Deacon Roberts and a well known cigar man, Sam Katz. All registered at the Palace Hotel.

From one to another the word was passed and the telephone was kept busy announcing that "Pelkey the man, who at Calgary finished Luther McCarty's career, was here on a fishing expedition." Then some baseball enthusiast put out a rumor that Pelkey would attend the match that evening with Cluny, on the Gleichen diamond and might be induced to act as umpire, with the result of a good crowd at the exciting match.

However, Mr. Pelkey with some friends left in an auto for the Bow river to spy out some good fishing pools, but returned about nine o'clock and made himself very amicable with all he met at the Palace Hotel and accompanied his friends to the Gleichen Hotel before retiring. In the morning he went to the North camp fishing, returning with little luck, but in the afternoon leaving for the mouth of Crowfoot creek brought back forty-five fine trout and pike, or a total of 156 pounds.

In conversation with a CALL reporter he said he had accompanied his wife as far east as Medicine Hat on a trip to her home and spent a few hours in Suffield, which place he thought too quiet, and on recommendation of friends had stopped off at Gleichen to spend a day's recreation fishing, and was not disappointed,

Then Mr. Pelkey became a Gleichen booster and said he was very much pleased with Gleichen, as everyone seemed generous and prosperous and the town appeared to be very substantial, he had enjoyed his visit here. In fact he hoped he would have leisure to spend more days in Gleichen.

He said he did not know how long he would remain in Alberta, but did not expect to have any contests for at least five or six months, and admitted that his next bout might be in England. The champion left Sunday morning for Calgary.

Within the last ten months gasoline has increased in price about eight cents per gallon. When one considers the rapid rise in this commodity which is controlled by the Standard Oil Company, there is cause for little astonishment when one hears the enormous dividends being declared by this money grasping corporation. Think of it. A few privileged characters are permitted to exploit a commodity that nature has generously provided the inhabitants of this world.—John D. should be ashamed to take the money.—Ex.

What would be the result in heaven itself if those who get there first instituted private property in the surface of heaven, and parcelled it out in absolute ownership among themselves, as we parcel out the suface of the earth? Since we cannot conceive of a heaven in which the equal rights of God's children to their father's bounty is denied, as we now deny them on this earth, what is the duty enjoined on christians by the daily prayer; "Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be Done, on Earth, as it is in Heaven?"—Henry George.

Weed Inspector N. N. Hayes last week started out on his official business and when seen on Monday said he had already discovered quite a number of places badly infested. Questioned he said some were close to town but did not care to mention names. He was anxious that every one should get after the weeds as he really did not like to order it done, although he would be obliged to unless he found them doing their best. Take a friendly warning and get after the weeds.

CHAPTER IX.

The Meeting

Green was standing in the hall as Joan went through it on her way out, but she did not seem to see him. He watched her very sulkily and angrily as she passed him without noticing him and he even appeared to be about to say something. But she gave him no opportunity, and in a moment the front door closed behind her.

Talk about gratitude, said Green disgustedly: and me that loosed her out of that room which she might have been burnt alive in, and now I ain't worth 'aving a word flung at seemingly—why, you might think as she was spurred with me. I do 'ate ingratitude, he said bitterly as he returned to the kitchen.

Joan did not take an omnibus though she had a long walk before her. But though she and her mother lived in comfort and even in some luxury, Mr. Durand never gave them any money. Even the few pence the omnibus would have cost was an object to Joan, and she walked steadily on and quickly through the crowded streets, one more poor groping human soul seeking she hardly knew what, bewildered by the stern press and bustle of life, and yet faintly, feebly trying to follow the truest rule of life—that which bids us plant each single step in the right direction and leave the rest to God who made us.

She was not far from her destination and was hesitating which was the right turning to take, when there broke upon her ear a low, delicious laugh so full of mirth and joy that something of sympathy with it awoke even in her own troubled heart. She turned quickly an unconscious smile on her lips, and saw just behind her Dora Rose, who laughed again as their eyes met.

Oh, Miss Durand, is that you? she cried merrily. Wait don't move. There.

Puzzled and amused, Joan waited while Dora danced towards her like a little stray beam that the setting sun had forgotten and left behind it to lighten the dull streets where the dusk and gloom of evening were now fast gathering in.

What is it? asked Joan, as Dora came to a standstill before her and then peeped eagerly past her, first to one tide and then to another.

It's Wilton, said Dora excitedly; he is playing a joke on me, the dear boy. Dora said this as though all the excellence and merit a man might acquire were increased tenfold if he played a joke on any of his friends. Don't move Miss Durand—oh, I do hope you're not in a hurry. He tried to frighten me just now, but I saw him and slipped off, and now I am waiting for him to come this way.

Once more she gave her little trilling laugh of purest joy, and Joan could not help smiling, even while wondering if she were expected to stand there all evening as a sort of living screen for Dora's ambush. Something of the same idea seemed in a minute or two to occur to Dora, and she blushed vividly and exclaimed:

Oh, dear Miss Durand, I do beg your pardon, I thought Wilton would come straight on, perhaps he never saw me at all. How horrid and mean of him, to be sure, if he didn't, and yet, she added, looking very puzzled, he went slippery-slidy by, exactly as if he were trying to avoid me.

Is it Mr. Mayne you mean? asked Joan. Are you sure it was he?

Oh yes, answered Dora; of course I only saw his back, but there is no one else in the world with a back quite like Wilton's. Perhaps he was just hurrying home. Are you going that way?

Well, answered Joan with slight hesitation, I have just been reading Mr. Mayne's book, and I was thinking—now I am so close—I should so like to see where he lives.

Would you, exclaimed Dora with her gay laugh, well, let's go, shall we? How funny! She paused for another laugh. Do you like his poems? I do awfully; I read a page of his book straight right through every night whether I understand it or not but he says it doesn't matter, and I do think it's sweet of him to say things like that. Don't you?

Very, said Joan, with another smile that hid a sharp pain at her heart as she reflected that there never had been and probably never would be any one to say such things to her.

What are you laughing at? inquired Dora; do you know I like you ever so much better when you laugh. Why don't you laugh all the time like I do? You frighten me when you are so solemn, but I like you when you smile, and what is the good of being sad? I think it's just silly to be sad.

So it is, agreed Joan, looking at the sunny young face upturned to her. This girl was perhaps two or three years younger than herself, but Joan felt as if at least as many centuries separated them. A kind of motherly tenderness rose in her and a desire to shield so bright a child of joy from all the turmoil and misery of the world. You are quite right, she said softly; it is wiser to be happy.

And much nicer, laughed Dora. Oh, look, isn't that horrible? No, don't look, come on, quick.

She fairly ran for it and darted round the corner of the street; but Joan stopped and looking slowly watched where across the roadway a little child with tears was guiding a drunken man.

Washmarrer, Tommy? the drunkard was saying thickly; washmarrer with you, Tommy, wash you cryin' 'bout, hey Tommy?

But without answering, still weeping his silent tears the child led him on, coaxing him towards his home. As they passed by Joan she stopped and whispered one word of sympathy and love into the poor child's ear. He looked up in a startled way and for a moment their eyes met—those of the well dressed lady and of the little ragged boy whom a community of bitter, early grief bound together. Then the whirling tide of the street parted them for ever, never to meet again yet equally never to forget, either of them, this one brief instant of meeting in eternity that heartened and cheered them both for the rough road their feet were set to tread through time.

Just round the corner Joan found Dora, who, though she had at first wished to seize the opportunity to escape from that sad-faced girl, as she mentally described Joan, had yet somehow found herself lingering for her to join her.

What did you stop for? she asked petulantly, as Joan came up; you couldn't do any good? I always just run away when I see sad things.

But Joan shook her head, and her face was very grave as she answered:

But if one runs too fast from sorrow one may easily run to meet it instead of to avoid it.

There now you are scolding and that's just what my aunt said, cried Dora pouting, and I don't like people a bit when they scold.

But I'm not, exclaimed Joan; indeed, Miss Rose, I did not mean to scold. And I like you, too, she added rather shyly, if I may say so.

We'll be friends then, shall we? asked Dora, rather flattered by this remark of Joan's whom secretly she had been inclined to regard as a very formidable, severe and probably very learned person. Only then, you must call me Dora, and I do think Dora Rose is such a pretty name, don't you?

I do indeed, answered Joan.

And I like yours, too, Dora rattled on; at least I do a little, she added doubtfully, only I think it's rather solemn—it sounds grave and weepy, somehow, like an anthem in church.

Then it suits a grave and solemn person like myself, answered Joan, and you know it was borne by the noblest woman who ever lived.

Oh, you mean Joan of Arc? cried Dora. Yes, mustn't it have been ripping to ride just like a man at the head of all those soldiers and order them about? Look, those are Wilton's rooms. Dear me, how odd, he can't be home yet for there is no light, and he always lights up just as soon as ever it's dusk. What can the silly boy be doing? Do you really like his poetry? I do awfully, only I wish he would write novels instead, with lots of love in them and me for the heroine, and I must say it's just a tiny relief sometimes at night when the poem I'm reading ends at the top of the page, and all the rest is blank and there is only one verse to get through; but what can he be doing now I can't imagine and I do think I might just run up and knock at his door, and see if he really is in, concluded Dora breathlessly.

The street was a quiet one, not leading anywhere in particular and with most of the houses let out in offices, so that after it began to get late, there were seldom many people about. At present no one was in sight except the two girls, and everything seemed quiet and deserted. The rooms that Wilton Mayne occupied were on the first floor, the ground being occupied by the offices of a large philanthropic society. Above Mayne's rooms again were other offices, while the whole of the top floor was occupied by a Government department which had overflowed from its headquarters. At night the building was almost invariably deserted and the consequent quietness was one of the reasons why Wilton Mayne liked his quarters so much.

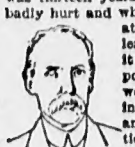

No one was playing the piano downstairs, he would say, and no champagne suppers overhead; and better still, no one to object if I want to play on the piano or give champagne suppers myself.

But the place had an appearance of desolation and desertion that struck Joan as almost ominous as she watched Dora disappear through the gloomy doorway that was never closed. Joan heard the echo of her steps as she ran lightly up the dusty stairs and then a sudden silence fell.

OLD SORE HEALED IN SIX DAYS

Nearly Impossible to Heal Skin. Badly Hurt. Sore, Red and Inflamed. Could Not Sleep. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

Bowsman River, Manitoba.—"When I was thirteen years of age I got my shin badly hurt and when healed the skin was attached to the bone. The least bruise would injure it and it was nearly impossible to heal. The sore would be very red and inflamed round the edges and had a burning sensation. When extra sore I could not sleep at night on account of the pain. I always wore a cotton bandage on it from the ankle to the knee. For a number of years I used sticking plasters, then got a salve. I saw the advertisement offering a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample and purchased some more and in six days the sore was healed completely." CHINESE LOOT STEAMER

Captain and Officers are Saved by Intercession of Woman Missionary

Hongkong, China. — The British West river steamer Taion, which signaled that it had been attacked by pirates, has arrived here. It reports that the pirates, whose numbers were variously estimated at from 50 to 100 and who were armed with revolvers, came on board at Hongkong last night disguised as passengers bound for Kongmoon.

The Taion was three hours out from Hongkong and was just outside British quarters and entering the Canton river delta, when the pirates rose. They killed the Chinese steersman, and having thus held the steamer up, seized Captain Holmes, Chief Officer Cornwall and Engineer Macartney, whom they tied up securely.

They attempted to burn a woman missionary's cabin with rags soaked in paraffine, and having stolen all her money, amounting to $80, and her gold watch, took her into the saloon. The woman prevailed on the pirates not to harm the European officers.

The pirates killed one and wounded four passengers all Chinese; ransacked the officers' cabins, stealing $170 in cash, besides a quantity of valuables, and secured a considerable amount of booty from the passengers.

They disabled the engines and dynamo, smashed the switchboard to atoms and carried off the ship's lights and stands of arms and ammunition. They held possession of the steamer for four hours, eventually rowing off in a boat, which they stole, and two sampans.

Miller's Worm Powders are par excellence the medicine for children who are found suffering from the ravages of worms. They immediately alter the stomachic conditions under which the worms subsist and drive them from the system, and, at the same time, they are tonical in their effect upon the digestive organs, restoring them to healthful operation and ensuring immunity from further disorders from such a cause.

KAISER TO VISIT GIBRALTAR

Wishes to Inspect World's Most Famous Fortifications

Berlin.—The Kaiser intends to pay a visit to Gibraltar next month in order to inspect the famous citadel. He will leave Cuxhaven in the Imperator, the giant Hamburg-American liner, which will be making its maiden trip.

Gibraltar will be reached in three days. One day will be devoted to the fortress, where it is expected several British and foreign battleships will gather to greet the royal visitor. The kaiser will then return to Germany on the Imperator, which will start on its first journey to America a week later.

The kaiser has sent an invitation to Sir Ernest Cassel to accompany him on the trip.

ASPHYXIATED IN A BUS

Fumes From Benzine Tank Endanger Lives of Passenger

Geneva.—A strange accident is reported from Fleims, in the Tyrol, endangering the lives of seven visitors, one of whom was an Englishman.

The motor omnibus, which had replaced the old horsed diligence in the district of Fleims, arrived at the station of Fonunne-Froide, and the chauffeur opened the door to ask the travelers to descend. All the passengers were lying in a heap, and looked as if they were dead. The unconscious travelers were at once carried to a hotel, where doctors attended them, and they recovered.

The cause of the accident was a defective benzine tank. The fumes of the gas had entered the closed car, gradually rendering the occupants unconscious.

NEW THEATRE IN PARIS

Built by a Syndicate Including Many Americans

Paris.—The Grand Theatre des Champs Elysees gave two inaugural performances recently of 'Benvenuto Cellini,' by Berlioz, and of 'Freischuetz,' because one performance would not be sufficient to enable the thousands who wished to do so to make acquaintance with the new theatre.

The Theatre has been built by a syndicate, in which there is a good deal of English and American money, in the Avenue Montaigne, which runs down to the Seine from the Champs Elysees. It will seat about 2000 people and has been built in rather less than two years.

Can Dutch Cows Read

The Hague.—Cattle unaccompanied by a drover are forbidden to cross this bridge, runs the inscription on a signpost near Harlem, Holland.

His Studies

I am inclined to suspect the sobriety of the last student in our class.

Why so?

When I asked him what were his favorite studies in ornithology, he replied: Swallows, bats and larks.

Eugene—This bookcase is an inch out of plumb. We must have that fixed.

Imogene—Oh, dear! And I've heard those plumbers are so expensive.

REGRET LOSS OF SECRETS

France In Possession of What She Would Have Given Fortune to Know

Berlin.—It was recently stated the press and public, with few exceptions, are manifesting a masterly composure over the fall of the Zeppelin secrets into the hands of the French. But in the ultra-patriotic quarters of the air party Z 4's fate produces a state of mind bordering on hysterics.

The Taegliche Rundschau suggests that the officers in the ship can only be adequately dealt with in the way France dealt with Marshall Bazaine for the surrender of Metz; namely, by courtmartial. The journal agrees with Die Post that it was the unquestionable duty of the senior German officer in Z 4 to blow up the airship with all on board and let it alight on the parade ground at Luneville a shapeless mass of smoking wreckage, rather than run the risk of permitting its priceless secrets to fall into French hands.

When the Zeppelin passenger airship company's offices at Frankfort-on-Main sent word to the kaiser at Homburg of the events at Luneville, his majesty's first inquiry was for the names of the officers on board.

It is declared that the French intelligence department has gained information for which it would probably have been glad to pay an immense sum of money. That is the point which strikes Germans as by far the gravest aspect of the affair. The Taegliche Rundschau even expresses the fear that the prize which has fallen into France's hands may be deemed by her of such enormous value that she will not much longer delay the day of reckoning. Captain Hildebrandt, in the Lokal Anzeiger, however, says the French will not even now be able to imitate the Zeppelins.

London.—A carpenter named Harnigold, living at Terrington, West Norfolk, dreamed on Wednesday night that on the following day he would have to make a coffin for his father. On the following morning the father was found dead in bed from heart seizure, and later in the day the son made the coffin.

SPRING IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD

A Tonic Medicine is a Necessity at This Season.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are an all year round tonic, blood-builder and nerve-restorer. But they are especially valuable in the spring when the system is loaded with impurities as a result of the indoor life of the winter months. There is no other season when the blood is so much in need of purifying and enriching, and every dose of these pills helps to make new, rich, red blood. In the spring one feels weak and tired—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills give strength. In the spring the appetite is often poor—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills develop the appetite, tone the stomach and aid weak digestion. It is in the spring that poisons in the blood find an outlet in disfiguring pimples, eruptions and boils — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills speedily clear the skin because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. In the spring anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, erysipelas and many other troubles are most persistent because of poor, weak blood, and it is at this time when all nature takes on new life that the blood most seriously needs attention. Some people dose themselves with purgatives at this season, but these only further weaken themselves. A purgative merely gallops through the system, emptying the bowels, but it does not cure anything. On the other hand Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood which reaches every nerve and organ in the body, bringing new strength, new health and vigor to weak, easily tired men, women and children. Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring—they will not disappoint you.

Wanted: A Keen Cutter

A successful but irascible playwright was in his New York studio one morning trying to whip a scene into good shape. The more attempts he made, the more irascible he became. Finally, during one of the painful pauses, his secretary ventured to ask:

Where is the paper-cutter?

I don't want any paper cutter! shouted the dramatist. I'm tired of living. What I want is a throat cutter!

It Cured Him

There had been a little breeze at dinner. Relations between husband and wife, were for the time being, distinctly strained. The silence grew oppressive.

So you think I smoke too much? he asked at length, harping back on the same chord, just by way of saying something.

Not at all, she replied deliberately forcing a yawn.

Well, that's what you said a few minutes ago.

I didn't say anything of the sort. I don't think you're smoking too much.

Didn't you say I'd die if I didn't cut it down?

Yes; that's what I said.

And it took him quite a long time to grasp the meaning of the remark. Then he was quite angry.

But it cured him of the habit.

LATE BABY RAISES QUIBBLE

Born Seven Weeks After the First, Can She be Considered a Twin?

London, England.—All the known baby records have been beaten by the wife of a workman at Barrow, a small manufacturing village near Clitherce, Lanes. On February 24, of this year she gave birth to a son. Both mother and child did well, but interesting developments seemed highly probable, and recently another child a girl, was born.

The existence of a baby boy who is only some seven weeks older than his baby sister threatens to raise problems which will make the Barrows babies famous. From the medical point of view they are twins. Regarded from the cold standpoint of Greenwich time they have missed their twinship by six full weeks.

Is the last arrival a belated twin, or is she a separate child—a sort of encore baby, as it were?

Here is a question which will keep the insurance commissioners busy for a week. On the arrival of Baby No. 1 the father probably applied for the maternity benefit of thirty shillings. Now according to the non-twin section, he is entitled to receive another thirty shillings. On the other hand if these are twins the second baby should be thrown in, for twins count as one, according to the insurance commissioners.

The house surgeons at Queen Charlott's Lying-in Hospital said that the case of the Barrow babies was most remarkable, but they agreed that the children were twins.

Cases of belated twin births are known, said one of the doctors, but the fact that such a long period as six weeks has elapsed between the two births makes this case extremely interesting.

FRANCE TO HAVE TROOPS

The Old Roman Idea to be Followed In Making a New Army

Paris, France.— For some time past there has been a very strong feeling in France, among those responsible for her safety, that the colonial army and the colonial government generally need reorganization, and efforts will be made to make of Algiers, Tunis, and ultimately Morocco, something even better than colonies.

Nothing is known of the details of the scheme which is under consideration, but it is understood that the broad lines are those of the ancient Roman colonization.

Germans who have lived here many years say quite openly that before long France will have to fight for her existence because Germany, now that the 'Drang nach Osten' (pressure towards the East) has been stopped by the unexpected growth of the Balkans and the disappearance of Turkey, will be forced to press toward the west. These beliefs are peculiarly interesting because of course, the presence of German troops and a German fleet at Dunkirk would not be over pleasing to Great Britain.

There are also disquieting rumors in Paris of German action in Tunis, Algiers and Morocco. It is said that German agents have for some time been very busily at work stirring up the Arabs and the Mussiemans generally against French domination.

Their work has been comparatively easy, for they insist on the fact that the Germans are the friends of Turkey, with whom Arab sympathies are strong, and there is notably in Tunis a very strong anti-French undercurrent.

Curiously enough, in M. Lavenden's play, 'Servir,' one of the four plays which have recently helped on an outburst of patriotic fervor here, the work of German secret agents in Morocco is made the reason of war between France and Germany.

FIERCE DUEL IN PARIS

Journalist and Deputy Are Antagonistic and Each Means Business

Paris, France.—A fierce and prolonged duel with swords took place at Neuilly, a suburb of Paris, recently, between M. Berthoulat, the brilliant and clever editor of La Liberte, and M. Ceccaldi, the well-known Radical-Socialist deputy. The affair arose out of some articles published in La Liberte after the recent debate in the chamber on the amnesty question.

When the adversaries met on the field M. Ceccaldi first began to make violent thrusts at his opponent's face but these were adroitly parried. Once M. Berthoulat's sword touched the ground and the director of the affair at once cried halt!

M. Ceccaldi stopped at once, but M. Berthoulat, carried away by his feelings, did not respond to the command, and his sword pierced M. Ceccaldi's shoulder. In spite of the injury, M. Ceccaldi insisted on continuing the duel.

More furious than ever before, the fight was resumed, M. Berthoulat for the most part, remaining on the defensive. Soon, however, he was again the aggressor, and he inflicted a wound on M. Ceccaldi's chest.

The seconds at once intervened and the fight was stopped. The surgeons in attendance found that the right lung had been penetrated. Late in the evening a bulletin was issued. In this the surgeons say that although both M. Ceccaldi's wounds are deep, no complications have as yet arisen.

Card tricks form an important part in the stock in trade of nearly every sleight-of-hand performer, says a writer in the Hamburg Artistische Nachrichten, and while they amuse us they hardly ever merit special attention. There has recently, however appeared on the stage a man who has gone several steps beyond the great army of dexterous card manipulators. Of course there is nothing superhuman about it all, but in seeing this blindfolded man pick thirty cards which had been selected by six different persons and telling the order in which they were drawn from a new pack which he had never handled makes one marvel at a peculiar skill which might easily pass for magic.

DOMINION FORESTS

How the Federal Reserves are Being Developed

The Dominion Forest Service has progressed farther than any other service in Canada in the laying out of forest reserves and providing for their proper administration. Sixteen million acres have been definitely set apart by Act of Parliament to be administered as forest reserves. Additional areas are being examined each year, and some six million acres additional are now under temporary reservation and will shortly be added to the reserves set apart by statute. The mere setting apart of reserves, though an important step, is only a preliminary one. Although, unfortunately, in some cases it has not been realized that anything further is necessary, this mistake has not been made in the federal administration.

The reserves have been organized by appointing an inspector in charge for each of the western provinces. The inspectors selected are men who have had a thoroughly technical training in forestry and who have shown good administrative ability. In each of the inspection districts the reserves areas are laid out in units or forests each under charge of a technically trained man or a man experienced in timber administration. Twelve such divisions have already been established, and others are being organized and manned with forest rangers as the development of the reserves and the fire danger may render necessary. These divisions do not include patrol outside of forest reserves on the large area of forest not included therein. In such areas there are in addition twelve patrol divisions each under charge of a chief fire ranger.

On each of the forests, houses have been erected for the forest rangers so that they may be close to their work and give it careful supervision. At different points throughout the forest, huts have been erected as headquarters for summer patrols and in some of the more inaccessible districts. 470 miles of trails and roads have been constructed so as to make the reserves more accessible. 10 bridges have been constructed, and 100 miles of telephone have been put in operation. A much enlarged programme of such improvement work has been laid out for the coming year.

A conference of the Inspectors was recently held at Ottawa to plan the work for the coming season and the construction work on the reserves will be pushed as rapidly as possible so as to have the reserves made immune from fire, as they are in Europe, in the shortest possible time.

A Puzzle

What puzzles me, said Uncle Snooks as he looked up from a book he was consulting, is this: If a man is standing on the side of a hill or mountain how is he to settle in his mind whether he is on an accivity or decivity? According to my dictionary here the former is a slope up and the latter a slope down. I've never yet seen a slope up that didn't slope down.

CHILDREN IN THE HOME

When there are children in the home it requires constant attention to keep them free from the many childhood ailments which come so quickly—some of them proving fatal while others leave the little one cross, restless and weak. To keep little ones well Baby's Own Tablets must be kept in the house. These Tablets regulate the stomach and bowels, break up colds and fevers; expel worms and make teething easy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

He Understood

The man and his wife in the motor car came face to face with the man on a heavily-laden wagon in a narrow lane. Quite as a matter of course the husband made a move to back out and allow the wagon to pass. But his wife objected.

Let him back out she said coldly. We were here first. He must have seen us coming.

Her husband pointed out that a sharp curve in the road rendered this impossible.

I don't care reiterated the dame in the car. I don't intend to move. I'd rather remain here all day.

But—, the husband began feebly.

Gie over, man, said the carter, and the tones of his voice expressed a great sympathy. Don't argy any more. I'll back out. I've got one like her at 'ome!

No Chance to Escape

I couldn't get out of marrying her, Henpeck explained When she proposed she said: Will you marry me? Have you any objection? You see, no matter whether I said yes or no, she had me.

Why didn't you just keep silent, then? inquired his friend.

That's what I did, and she said: Silence gives consent, and that ended it.

The house is so lonesome without you and the dear children, writes Blibbins now to the absent wife, who is with the family at her mother's.

But the faithful maid-of-all-work writes: Shure, man, Mr. Tlibbins hasn't been in until after twelve o'clock never a night since you left.

Cautious, Anyway.—Father—That young man of yours has more brains than I gave him credit for.

Daughter—Oh, papa, you don't really mean it?

Father—Yes, instead of coming to see me he called me up on the telephone.

SPLIT 40 CORDS AT AGE OF 85

Thankful to the Medicine That Gave Him Ability For the Task.

A VERY INTERESTING CASE

Few men of eighty-five years of age can boast of much else but poor health and failing strength. And such was the condition of Mr. Benj. Marsh, who is known to every soul in the neighborhood of his home at Lime Lake, Ont.

"Quite unsolicited," writes Mr. Marsh, "I wish to say how I have been bothered for years with stomach trouble. I tried everything I could think of without benefit. I was terribly afflicted with swelling and gas, and had much distress between meals. I tried everything I could think of, but without benefit. Then I was recommended Nerviline. My, but Nerviline did me a power of good—made a new man of me, so that within the last three weeks I have been able to split about forty cords of stove wood. I will always stick to Nerviline and will always recommend it, and would like to meet anyone and convince them if in doubt as to what Nerviline has done for me."

For sour stomach, nausea, belching of gas, cramps and sudden sickness at night, nothing is more helpful in the home, nothing saves so much pain and distress as Nerviline. Large family size bottles, 50c; small size, 25c; at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y.

All Square

It was in a West End restaurant, where Sandy went for a drink, and he ordered a whisky and soda, for which they charged him a whole shilling. He complained of the price and said that he was only accustomed to pay threepence for a nip of whisky.

Next day Sandy went into the same place again, ordered a drink and put down threepence. It was a different barman, but he protested.

No, no said Sandy. No, no, mon; that's all right. I saw yer pictures yesterday.

MOTHERHOOD SUGGESTIONS

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

C.P.R. Flower Day

It is just twenty-four years since an employe of the C.P.R. raised a few varieties of flower seeds in his own garden and distributed them among his friends in the company with the idea of beautifying to some extent the somewhat barren aspect of the stations on the railroad round houses and yard offices on the company's property. It was a small beginning but today the C.P.R. is celebrating its semi-annual flower day and the little seed planted in the earlier day has grown to such an extent that it requires a floral department to handle the work and instead of a few packages of seeds handed out to a limited number of employes no less than 150,000 packets of various varieties have been distributed to station agents, section foremen, those in charge of round houses, yard offices and all employes living on company's property, showing an inclination towards the cultivation of flowers. In the fall a million of bulbs were given out and the benefit of these is now being felt, as from the Atlantic to the Pacific and even on Vancouver Island, the traveller will see the delightful results from the fall planting of these luxurious flowers. Even in the midst of the prairies where men are permanently encamped working on the irrigation ditches at forty different points have seeds been sent for cultivation, which is another demonstration of the effect the tending of flowers has on the human mind and body. These men take a great delight in caring for the plants as they gradually grow and enjoy their fragrance as much as the man nearer home. The influences and encouragement of flower growing on the C.P.R. during the last twenty-four years has materially assisted in the inauguration of floral societies in almost every town along the lines of the system, and an examination will show that actively connected with these hundreds of societies are employes of the C.P.R. whose first lesson in flower culture and the love of the beautiful were learned in the service of the company under the stimulating influences of the Floral department. Station improvements have led to town improvements and often the C.P.R. is asked to co-operate with some of these institutions for the beautifying of open spaces, and in many instances the station is a sort of bureau for flower information, while the floral department at Montreal is looked upon as the headquarters of flower information for the whole of the C.P.R. system from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In every division special prizes are awarded for the best displays and many of the employes have become so interested in the work as to try their results against the best in the country by exhibition at the big exhibitions. In many instances they have been very successful and have carried away the premier prizes Many agents have wonderful vegetable gardens in the west for the climate is such that anything can be grown.

The Pill That Brings Relief.—When after one has partaken of a meal he is oppressed by feelings of fullness and pains in the stomach he suffers from dyspepsia, which will persist if it be not dealt with. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the very best medicine that can be taken to bring relief. These pills are specially compounded to deal with dyspepsia, and their sterling qualities in this respect can be vouched for by legions of users.

Exact Location

It doesn't always pay a lawyer to be stern with the posing witnesses when cross-examining them. They are often as clever as the attorney and the following anecdote illustrates how one witness put one over on a bright young lawyer.

Sir, said the lawyer sternly, you need not state your impressions. We want facts. Now, henceforward, answer me categorically. You say you live next door to the defendant?

Yes. To the north of him?

No. To the south?

No. To the west, then?

No.

Ah, said the lawyer sarcastically, at last we are likely to get down to one real fact. You live to the east of him, do you?

No.

How is that, sir? said the astonished attorney You say you live next door to him yet you live neither to the east, west, south nor north. What do you mean by that sir?

I thought perhaps you were incompeten to form the impression that we live in a flat, said the witness; but I see I must inform you that he lives next door above me.

'Twas Better So

They were engaged. Perhaps I repented; perhaps he did it only for fun. Said he:

My darling Ethel, what would you say if I were to tell you that I cannot marry you.

I would say, my dearest love, that I have a big brother who would make it warm for you, and that I have some of the sweetest little billets-doux that would make it expensive for you, George dear.

But you know I haven't said it.

I know you haven't, my pet.

Fate of the Fare

The portly gentleman hailed the passing cab. Cabby, he said, $1.50 if you drive me to the station in less than fifteen minutes.

In he jumped and away went cabby at a rattling rate. On reaching the station he was delighted to see that he had still three minutes to spare. As soon as the door was opened the fare stepped out, panting and mopping his streaming brow.

Whatever's the matter? asked cabby.

Matter! Phew! Can't you see that the bottom's dropped out of the cab and I've had to run all the way to the station. Phew! Then, as he looked about him, his purple face becoming mauve. Cabby, he said, you've brought me to the wrong station, and I've lost the train.

Gleichen Customs Office

A lady living north of Bassano has sent in over sixty names in favor of a customs office being located at Gleichen. The majority giving their post office address as Bassano and the balance are farmers and ranchers transacting their business in Bassano. "Enclosed please find my last list of names for your customs office petition and I think that if each one who receives your paper has done as well you should be the means of getting the office."

Many of the residents of this portion of the Province are completing arrangements to attend the Calgary exhibition in July, and from the information which is received concerning the programme arranged for that week, there will be something doing all the time. From an exhibition point of view there is assurance of a very large display in all departments. The live stock breeders are preparing their animals for the show ring, and the reputation which Alberta has received as a stock country will again be amply demonstrated. The many District exhibits and the individual displays made by some of the most successful farmers in the province will provide some very keen competitions for the premier honors It is to be hoped that this portion of the country will be represented as the publicity that would be derived by having Gleichen carry off the premier honors would be of incalculable value.

An ozone from a Queenstown bachelor is to the effect that 'Rosey' has prepared the interior of his shack for a June wedding.

It is stated that the result of the census taken of Gleichen shows the population to be 1015.

M. Bollinger states that among the number of fruit-trees he planted on his farm just north-east of town, five years ago, he is pleased to say they are proving most successful. He is particularly pleased now with seeing five plum trees in bloom as he says these are the first plum trees he has heard of being planted in this district. He reports his berry and currant bushes as doing exceptionally well this year.

Mrs. A. E. Williams Receives big Price For Her Seed Flax

Mrs. Annie E. Williams, of Gleichen, had a record flax crop last year. She seeded 63.33 acres, and threshed 1877 bushels which is equivalent to 29.63 bushels to the acre. The significance of this will be more readily appreciated when it is stated that the average yield per acre last year in Alberta was 12.83, in Saskatchewan 12.56, in Manitoba 13.39, in all Canada 12.60, and in the United States 9.90 bushels to the acre.

The variety which was grown was "Premost", a new kind which has has been developed by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, and which ripens from ten days to a fortnight earlier than ordinary flax. The record of the growth of this crop shows that it was seeded April 16 18, was one foot high and in bloom on June 23rd, ripe on August 10th and cut on August 27th. The germination test over seven days showed 96%.

With the co-operation of the Agricultural Branch, Department of Natural Resources, Canadian Pacific Railway, Calgary, a large proportion of this crop, namely, 1280 bushels, was sold for seed purposes to a Hanna farmer, at the price $3.00 per bushel; the C.P.R. also bought in a quantity for use on its Demonstration Farms. It should be noted by all farmers that the Agricultural Branch is at all times at their services for placing them into communication with purchasers of seed grains and grasses, and that it has in most cases secured larger prices for the farmer than he might have obtained locally.

Everybody's doing it, cleaning up the back yard and getting the garden ready for business. A week solution of formaldehyde over the places where flies are likely to breed where refuse is likely to be placed, will save considerable swatting and shooing later. The fly is an acknowledged spreader of disease especially of those disorders which affect the bowels. Typhoid, dysentery, etc., are traced to the fly.

SAVED FROM SUICIDE

Letter to Him Announcing Her Intention Rushed to Public Station

Paris, France.—A dramatic attempt at suicide by a girl of 19, named Noel was prevented at Cherbourg recently by the presence of mind of her brother, a railway guard.

The young man was swinging himself on the footboard of a train which was leaving for Paris when a letter without an envelope was handed him. The letter contained a few incoherent lines from his sister saying that she was going to commit suicide, and that her body would be found in the sea at the end of the jetty.

Young Noel at the risk of his life, jumped from the train, retaining hold of the rail, and running along with the train, gave his sister's letter to a man at the other end of the platform, where he swung himself on the footboard again, shouting to his colleague to run as hard as he could with the letter to the police.

Fortunately, there was a police magistrate in the station, and more fortunately still, there was a motor-car just outside. The police magistrate dashed at full speed down the jetty and arrived as Mlle. Noel threw herself into the sea. The magistrate shouted to three customs house officers in a boat which was putting into the harbor and they succeeded in saving the girl when she was nearly 100 yards from shore. Her brother received the news of her resuce when the train arrived at Caen.

TOBACCO SMUGGLED IN PRISON

Official Guilty of the Act is Sent to Jail for Four Months

London, England. An extraordinary story of the ease with which convicts have been able to communicate illicitly with their friends and receive presents of tobacco from them was unfolded at the Portland police court recently.

Samuel Crowhurst, a civil guard at Portland convict prison, was charged with having illegally conveyed tobacco into the prison. As he pleaded guilty no evidence was taken; but Mr. Prym who appeared for the treasury, fully explained the details of the case.

He said that Crowhurst did not come in contact with the convicts within the prison hall but he had an opportunity of seeing convicts who worked apart from the ordinary gangs outside of the prison.

One such man was a convict named Day, with whom Crowhurst became acquainted and used as a medium between other convicts and their friends. At the end of last year there was considerable traffic in the prison and a watch being kept, a quantity of tobacco was found concealed in a part of the prison where Day worked. The tobacco was found in a ground frame used for rearing plants and was hidden under sawdust.

Chief Inspector Ward and Inspector Burton were sent from London to make a special investigation. They found that Day had received letters which various convicts had written to their friends asking them to send money for tobacco.

They also found that Day had handed the letters to Crowhurst, and that he had inserted in them a slip of paper requesting money for the tobacco to be sent to Mr. Crother, care of post-office.

Postal orders were sent by friends to Crowther, and they were received and cashed by Crowhurst, who bought tobacco, handed it to Day: who in turn put it in a secret store and eventually distributed it among the other convicts.

The magistrates sent Crowhurst to prison for four months.

The Woman and the Dog

An elderly woman, with a small dog upon her lap, while riding in a trolley car, asked the conductor if he would kindly tell her when he got to Hazel street.

After she had got up two or three times, the conductor told her to keep her seat and he would let her know when they reached Hazel street.

Finally he called out: Hazel street.

The woman held the dog up to the window, and said: Fido, look! There's where you were born! Then turning to the conductor, she remarked, I'm going to the end of the line.

LINER HALF MILE IN LENGTH

An Expert Expects Wonderful Increase in Size of Ocean Steamships

An Atlantic liner half a mile long, registering 200,000 tons, having a beam of 240 feet, and carrying 60,000 passengers is the astounding leviathan predicted for the year 1955 by the statistican, S. C. Gilfillan. That is, if the growth in the size of ships for the next 40 years continues at the same rate as the last 40 years. We are shown a plotted curve indicating the growing size of modern liners, which begins with the Great Western of 1840 and rises with a steadily increasing ascent to the Olympic and Imperator of today. If this curve is projected in the most conservative path to the year 1935 we have a ship 1600 feet long, and in two decades more one of 2450 or five times the length of the Olympic.

Ships have been growing larger, says our authority, ever since Mr. Paleolithicus, or more probably his younger son, first sat on a log and paddled himself across a creek. And the growth has been perfectly continuous except for one break at the close of the Roman Empire, when civilization declined. The extremely rapid development of material civilization today will surely not be much halted in the next generation, especially since the speed of progress is accelerating and one of the characteristics of civilization has for a century been a universal growth in the size of things—buildings, railroads, ships, machines.

It is hard to imagine a ship whose cable-links each weigh two-thirds of a ton, being launched in two decades and a half. But the curve of growth has been steady and sure, except where the Great Eastern exceeded it. If we say that it will not continue in the future we but echo what has been said time and again in the past, and always the curve has continued. Objections that greater ships would be unwieldly, too deep for our harbors, etc., have been made in the past and blotted out by the next leviathan. The advantages of having such large ships will be the greater speed they will afford, a reduction of the danger of perils at sea, and the provision of greater comforts and amusements, not to mention the practical abolition of sea sickness.

THE SPEED OF YOUR WALK

Told by a Piece of String, a Weight and Some Knots, With the Aid of a Watch

There is a very simple way of telling what speed one walks. Take a piece of thin string, say 80 to 100 yards long. To one end tie a weight—a piece of lead or other metal, or even a stone. At a point 44 feet from the weight put a knot or loop. Then put a second knot or loop 44 feet from the first, and so on the entire length of the string put a series of knots or loops 44 feet from each other.

Take in one hand a watch with a second hand. Now drop the weight upon the ground and walk along at an ordinary pace, letting the weight remain where it fell, and allowing the knots or loops to slip through one hand. The number of knots or loops to slip through the hand in half a minute are the same as the number of miles walked in an hour.

It is always well to know the reason for what we do, says the Children's Magazine. It is not enough to know that the number of times we walk 44 feet in half a minutes is the same as the number of miles we walk in an hour. We ought to know why it is so. The reason is that 44 feet is the one hundredth and twentieth part of a mile, because a mile contains 5,280 feet or 1,7600 yards, and a half a minute is the one hundred and twentieth part of an hour. Therefore we are able to walk one hundred and twentieth of a mile just as many times in one hundred and twentieth of an hour as we can walk a mile in an hour.

COUNTESS COURT-MARTIALED

Descendant of Vasco da Gama Accused of Treason to Portuguese Republic

Lisbon. — The greatest interest was aroused throughout Portugal by the trial by court-martial of Donna Constanca da Gama, a descendant of Vasco da Gama, the famous Portuguese explorer who rounded the cape in 1498, and daughter of the countess of Cascaes, who had been imprisoned since July on a charge of conspiracy against the republic.

Donna da Gama refused to allow any witnesses to be called for the defense and instructed her lawyer not to ask for her acquittal. The court was crowded. Hundreds of women were present, all wearing black. Nearly all of those present rose when the prisoner entered and took her place by the side of two other prisoners—a soldier and a servant—who were alleged to have been her accomplices.

The trial ended by the acquittal of Donna de Gama and the condemnation of the other two prisoners to two years' imprisonment.

A city woman who recently passed a few days at a farm, bought some poultry from the farmer with a view to providing fresh eggs for breakfast every morning. She sent them to town by messenger, at the same time despatching a note to her husband telling him to look out for the consignment. Her husband, on reaching his home that night, asked if the poultry had arrived. He was informed that it had, but explained the servant he had carelessly left the basement door open and all the chickens had escaped. A fowl hunt was immediately organized. The next day the husband, meeting his wife on her return, exclaimed: A nice time I had with your poultry. I spent three hours hunting and only found ten.

You may consider yourself lucky, then, replied his wife, for I only bought six.

A Good Sign

A French diplomat at a luncheon in Washington, praised President Wilson's inaugural address.

I liked the modest tone of this address, he said. I liked the ending, where he asked so humbly and so sincerely for the people's support and counsel.

A Clear Record

Seeing the youngster sitting on the doorstep, crying pitiably, a kind-hearted old gentleman went up to him, and asked what might be the matter with the lad.

Hunger appeared to be the matter; the boy said he hadn't had anything to eat that day.

But why doesn't your father give you food?

No reply.

What is your father? asked the would-be philanthropist.

'E's my father, came the somewhat astounding reply.

Yes, but what is he?

Ow, really 'e's my stepfather.

Yes, yes, yes! exclaimed the old gentleman impatiently. But what does he do? Sweep chimneys, drive a 'bus, or what?

The light of intelligence suddenly dawned on the small boy's puzzled face.

Oh, 'e ain't done nuffin since we 'ad 'im, he replied.

KAISER APOLOGIZES TO TENANT

Man of Whom He Had Spoken Slightingly In Public Has His Revenge

Berlin, Germany.—The case of the kaiser's tenant, Herr Sohst has been settled to the satisfaction of both parties. Herr Sohst has consented to give up his farm, the lease of which had still five years to run, on payment of $30,000 from the kaiser's agent. Herr Sohst has also received a letter from the kaiser's civil cabinet, the contents of which are not divulged, but in which, presumably, regret is expressed that his majesty had been misinformed.

Finally, and this makes a deep impression here, Herr Sohst has had conferred on him the Fourth Class of the Order of the Crown, probably as a sort of salve for his wounded feelings.

It will be remembered that last February, at a meeting of the German Agricultural Association, the kaiser addressed this body, giving his experiences on his estate at Cadinen. In the course of his observations he remarked that one of his tenants, whom he described as no good, had been thrown out by him. This tenant was Herr Sohst, who is regarded in the neighborhood as a most capable farmer, and whose lease had still several years to run.

It has taken six weeks to arrange the matter, and in some quarters it is believed that it would not have been arranged even now had not the crown prince taken the matter up and urged a settlement.

Cornerstone of Successful Farming

More essential than instruction in farming itself is the teaching of domestic economy as it may be applied by the farmer's wife, for domestic economy is the underlying principle of successful farming. The farmer may work for years but he can progress no further than his wife progresses. If the woman is without the knowledge to become efficient in her department then farm life is one of discontent and dissatisfaction.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS QUICKLY CURED HIS KIDNEY DISEASE

How Hudson Marchbank, After Suffering for Five Years, Found Quick Relief and Permanent Cure in the Greatest of Canadian Remedies

Marchbank, King's County, N.B. (Special)—After suffering for five years from kidney disease, brought on by a strain, Hudson Marchbank, Esq., the well-known farmer of this place, is again a strong, healthy man, and another grand cure for Dodd's Kidney Pills has been put on record. In an interview Mr. Marchbank says:

"About five years ago I hurt my back from lifting, and it developed into kidney disease. My back pained me all the time, and I was very much troubled with headaches. My appetite was fitful; I had a bitter taste in my mouth in the mornings; I perspired freely, and my perspiration had a disagreeable odor.

"I used liniments and plasters, but they did not do me any good, and as there were other symptoms that my kidneys were affected, I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes, my back was completely cured, and my kidneys have not troubled me since."

When Mr. Marchbank decided that his kidneys were the cause of his troubles, the rest was easy. Almost any of his neighbors could tell him that Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure diseased kidneys.

JUDGE AND LAWYER ASSAILED

Strange and Turbulent Scene Marks Close of Murder Trial at Naples

Naples, Italy. — The trial of Yvoane de Villespreux, the young Italian comedy actress, who is said to have killed her lover, Dr. Ettore Turdo, in a fit of jealousy, has come to an abrupt close with disgraceful scenes of violence between the king's procurator general and the lawyers for the defense.

Although the accused has been in prison awaiting trial for three years, the medical experts it is said, have not had time to examine her mental condition, while the chief of the forty witnesses are now scattered in various parts of North and South America and Erythrea. For these reasons the procurator general, who corresponds to the American district attorney, moved the indefinite postponement of the trial to a future assize. To this the presiding judge agreed.

This was the signal for an outbreak of disorder. Atrocious insults were hurled from the well of the court against the chancellor, procurator and judges. 'Scoundrels, liars!' bawled the procurator general. 'Base villains!' retorted the chief lawyers for the defense. The procurator then sprang from the bench with uplifted fists. Court attendants hurriedly interposed themselves between the combatants, while the presiding judge jumped from the bench, and tugging vigorously at the procurator's toga, got that official out of danger by a back exit. The crowd cheered the disorderly lawyers, while armed police were ordered to clear the court.

Before this amazing scene the judge had put the prisoner through clever cross-examination, during which, after reminding her that before she was 18 she had been twice charged with theft and condemned to ten months' detention in a reformatory, he elicited that instead of having been born in Spain, as she pretended Villespreux had never been nearer that country than Turin, her native city. She admitted that her real name is Fornais, that she had fled from home when barely 13, and that before starting her stage career she had been a chambermaid. She pleaded she took the blame of one of the thefts herself, in order to shield a criminal lover she was living with at the time.

Is Health Only A Game of Chance?

If you are accustomed to look on health as a gamble you will probably prove a loser early in the game.

Some may hold on to health and life for considerable time and defy the laws of nature, but there are many rules of the game which are conducive to wealth and long life.

Take nervous diseases, for example. There are many symptoms to warn one of the approach of nervous exhaustion long before there is danger of locomotor ataxia or some dreadful form of paralysis.

But they seem such little things that their danger signal is not taken notice of. Sleeplessness, headache, indigestion, irritability, loss of vigor and energy, discouragement and despondency, all point to low vitality and exhausted nerves.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has been wonderfully successful in the cure of nervous disease of a serious nature, such as prostration, locomotor ataxia and partial paralysis, but persistent treatment and considerable patience are necessary.

On this account we prefer to think of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a preventive treatment, which overcomes these symptoms by rebuilding the feeble, wasted nerve cells and restoring vigor to mind and body.

CROP ROTATION FOR THE DAIRY FARM

As dairymen it is necessary for us to pause and consider the farm itself and how we can best produce the necessary feeds before we even come to the care and keeping of the dairy cow herself, writes H. O. Daniels. Following is a brief history of crop and soil conditions upon our Connecticut farm: Twenty-four years ago this farm did not produce hay enough to feed five cows, a yoke of oxen and one horse. Hay had to be purchased each spring. Upon attending farmers' meetings interest was awakened, and we began to study the analysis of feeds and fertilizers.

We opened up the dairy business and had to buy more cows, and then we had more cows than we could feed.

The illustration shows the udder of a dairy cow that comes near to the ideal. It belongs to Valdessa Scott II., a pure bred Holstein, the first cow in the world to produce 40 pounds of butter in one week. Her record is 103.6 pounds of milk, 5.95 butter fat in one day; seven days, 695.1 milk, 41.87 butter fat; thirty days, 2,933.9 milk, 165.48 butter fat. Valdessa Scott II. is owned by Bernhard Meyer, Finderne stock farms, Finderne, N. J. She has a daughter, Valdessa Ormsby De Kol, who has a two-year-old record of 22.73 pounds of butter in seven days.

So we bought standing grass and later on heard about the silo and put one in, growing the corn necessary to fill it. We were the laughing stock of all the neighbors, but with silage we made more milk than before and have since added more silos until we have today 675 tons capacity and plant thirty-five acres to corn.

We began by raising corn year after year on the same land. It was near the barn, and we did not want to haul the fodder so far, but after a time we found we were not getting as good results. A man who visited us suggested that we sow clover on the corn land and raise our corn somewhere else, and we finally decided to do it. We have tried clover for ensilage, and it is even better for feeding than when made into hay, especially the clover rowen or second crop. If the weather is wet and the clover hay cannot be cured put it in the silo. Clover silage will tide you over July and August, when the pastures dry up and the most critical period of milk production is at hand.

Twenty loads of stable manure on clover sod make an excellent foundation for the corn crop, and such sod will raise twenty-five tons of corn to the acre. After harvesting the corn we do not touch the land in the fall if the ground is level; if hilly we sow winter rye. We do not plow the land in the spring, but cut it all up with a cut-away harrow and sow two bushels oats, six quarts red clover, two quarts alsike and three quarts timothy with a drill. Lime is also used before sowing the seed and sown with a drill. This gives us in the second year a crop of oat hay which is fully as good for milk production as mixed hay and a second crop of clover.

The third year we have a solid crop of clover. Clover is too solid a crop to go into the silo alone. It has not sugar enough in it to preserve it well, and we like to have some timothy in it, as that supplies the necessary sugar and supplements what the clover lacks. This clover sod is used for our corn crop, and in this way we plow up the entire tillable area every three years.

Remove the Horns.

Horns on a dairy cow are a common source of serious injury, especially to udders belonging to other cows in the herd. Unless the cow is to be used for show ring purposes by all means remove her horns. This is most successfully done when she is a calf under three days of age. Simply clip away the hair surrounding the small buttons that are the future horns and rub on caustic potash until the skin bleeds slightly. If the work is properly done a dent can be felt in the skull after a few days, and no horns will ever develop. Dehorning of grown animals should be done in fall or winter, when there are no flies to bother the wound.—Farm Press.

Swapping Horses.

It may be right to deceive a man in a horse trade, but if you want to secure a permanent customer it is mighty poor business to use such methods.—Professor W. M. Wilson, State College of Agriculture, New York.

CHARGED THE ENEMY.

It Wasn't Because He Was Brave and Defied Death, Though.

General Basil Duke of Louisville, commander of Morgan's cavalry following the death of his brother-in-law, General John Morgan, told this story at a reunion of the survivors of the battle of Shiloh.

He said that during one of the Tennessee campaigns Morgan's men surprised and drove back a regiment of Federal troopers. In the midst of the retreat one of the enemy, who was mounted upon a big bay horse, suddenly turned and charged the victorious Confederates full tilt, waving his arm and shrieking like mad as he bore down upon them alone. Respecting such marvelous courage, the Confederates forbore shooting the approaching foe, but when he was right upon them they saw there was a different reason for his foolhardiness.

He was a green recruit. His horse had run away with him. The bit had broken, and, white as a sheet and scared stiff, the luckless youth was being propelled straight at the whooping Kentuckians, begging for mercy as he came.

Jeff Sterritt, a noted wit of the command, stopped the horse and made a willing prisoner of the rider. Sterritt, who had not washed or shaved for days and was a ferocious looking person, pulled out a big pistol. "I don't know whether to kill you right now," he said, "or wait until the fight is over."

"Mister," begged the quivering captive, "don't do it at all. I'm a dissipated character, and I ain't prepared to die."—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

REAL ROOF GARDENS.

The Kind They Plant on Log Cabins in Rural Norway.

The log cabins of rural Norway are built of heavy pine logs hewed square and of equal size from end to end. They are usually stained or oiled, and their rich yellowish or brownish color is in harmony with almost any surroundings. Their roofs are sodded, a circumstance that adds picturesqueness to the general effect.

"I have come across roofs that were a riot of wild pansies," says a writer in the Craftsman, "and I have seen wonderful roofs where wild roses hung over the eaves or a daisy roof, the effect of whose white, starlike flowers, topping the dark brown structure, was exquisitely picturesque.

"Some roofs produce only pasture grass, and the story runs in Norwegian folklore that a lazy man led his cow on the roof—the cabin was built against a hill—instead of taking her to the pasture. I have no doubt that the story is true, for I have often seen a couple of white kidlets gamboling on the soft green housetops while the mother goat, grave and ruminative, was tethered to the chimney.

"Sod roofs are just as water tight as others if they are laid correctly. A board roof is first laid upon a house, and this is covered with a layer of birch bark. On top of this comes a layer of sod with the grass turned down to the roof, then a rather thick layer of earth and finally another layer of sod, this time with the grass up. The result is a most exquisite and poetical covering for the house."

Work of the Doctor.

Dr. Stephen Paget has some interesting observations on the doctor and his rewards in his "Confessio Medici." "If medicine is a trade why should the doctor so often work for nothing?" he asks. "If it is an art what works of art does he produce? None, says Claude Bernard, 'Le medecin artiste ne cree rien.' But surely he is wrong. The doctor, so far from creating nothing, creates life, for he saves or prolongs life, creates more life. If Miss X. is seventy, and the doctor by an operation enables her to live till she is seventy-five he has not prolonged the seventy years, for they were ended before he came, but he has created five brand new years. If he had not been there they would not be here. That is creation."—London Chronicle.

Velocity of Light.

The velocity of light as determined by Simon Neewomb is 299,860 kilometers, or 186,327 miles, per second reduced to a vacuum or space specific speed. Time required for light to come here from moon, 1.3 seconds; from sun, 8 minutes 19 seconds; from nearest star, 4.35 years; from Sirius, 8.7 years; from Arcturus, not less than 40 years, and from others vastly more remote, from 1,000 to 5,000 years.

Schoolroom Humor.

The following schoolboy "howlers" come from New Zealand:

"Gross darkness is 144 times darker than ordinary darkness."

"Marconi is the stuff you use to make delicious puddings."

"Charon was a man who fried soles over the sticks."

Necessary Knowledge.

"Why are you learning French?"

"Why? Because I've just got a dog from France, and the silly beast can't understand a word of English."—London Tit-Bits.

What men want is not talent, it is purpose; not the power to achieve, but the will to labor.—Bulwer Lytton.

THE FLOCKMASTER.

As the ewes grow heavy with lamb, care must be taken to avoid crowding at the racks and feed troughs. Crowding may cause the loss of lambs.

Sheep need succulent food to counteract the effects of a dry winter ration. Turnips are a most profitable addition to the bill of fare.

Keep a close watch of the flock, and if any member shows signs of weakness or lack of thrift separate it from the flock by hurdles and give extra care and feed.

In addition to clover or alfalfa hay each breeding ewe should receive about half a pound a day of a mixture of oats, wheat bran and peas.

The ewes must carry some flesh to make the flock profitable. If breeding ewes are kept thin in flesh the flock will surely degenerate.

RAISING DRAFTERS.

Success With Horses Demands a Wise Selection of Breeding Stock.

In raising draft horses a wise selection of breeding stock is of the most importance. Drafters of heavy weight, good action and proper conformation cannot be produced from undersized, inferior or unsound breeding stock, writes M. Watson in the National Stockman. First of all, a good brood mare should be sound and free from all defects. A sound mare of fairly good, wide, drafty type, even though she may not be so very large, if mated with the right kind of stallion will produce drafters of a high order. Such a mare, however, should not be bred to a stallion of extreme weight. Better results will follow if she is bred to the rugged, heavy boned stallion of medium draft size and the fillies from this crossbred to the heavy stallion.

In breeding draft horses the stallion is of even greater importance than the mare on account of there being so many mares that are undersized. It is important that the stallions should be of good size and heavy bone, and soundness in a stallion should be the first consideration. It is a matter of surprise that farmers do not pay more attention to this point both when buying a stallion and when breeding their mares. They are apt to select a stallion much as they would a steer, being influenced almost entirely by the size and appearance of the body, and too little attention is given to the feet and legs. It is impossible to have a good draft horse without good feet and the legs sound and well placed. There never was a time when the light boned, undersized draft stallion was so poor an investment as now. The big, strong boned, shapely fellows are those that will make the money. When I speak of size I do not mean weight alone. Too many farmers are deceived by mere weight. A draft horse at maturity in good condition should weigh from 1,800 pounds to a ton.

In the highest type of draft horse of late years much more attention has been given to quality and action. There is good reason for this. The drafter of good action is much more useful on the farm than the horse whose greatest qualification is simply weight. While the drafter is not a driver and never will be, he should be a good walker and go free and straight at the trot in order to be of the greatest use on the farm. A man who has a pair of mares that move in a straight line and have a good walk does not complain that he cannot get enough work out of his team. Quality is also very desirable. It always attracts the attention of the buyer and makes the horse a ready seller. Not only is it important that the drafter should be wide awake and active for farm use, but it is equally important in the drafter that goes to the city.

Grass and Green Corn For Cattle.

A southern Wisconsin farmer annually markets 100 to 300 head of beeves, which he fattens on his 700 acre corn and blue grass farm. In order to minimize labor this farmer buys his cattle in the spring and runs them on blue grass pasture throughout the summer, where they make profitable and economical gains. In case of drought in late summer he supplies the steers with green corn fed as a soiling crop. In a word, the gains that these animals accumulate are made mostly on pasture, and it is only during the last three or four weeks of the finishing period that they have access to ear corn.

Feed Calves by Hand.

The dairyman who today allows his calves to suck the cows is about as far behind the times as the man who harvests his grain with the cradle. There are still a few men who pose as dairymen who follow this practice. The better practice is to allow the calf to get the first milk direct from the udder and remain with the cow for thirty-six hours, then take away and give it milk to drink from a pail. The amount given should not exceed one gallon twice a day. The better way still would be to give this amount at three intervals instead of two.

Feed For the Dry Cow.

The ration for the dry cow should be formulated with three things in mind—namely, to furnish a sufficient amount of protein to properly develop the fetus and allow a surplus for the needs of the body of the cow, to supply enough carbohydrates that the cow may lay on a little fat and to supply succulence.

GOT DRUNK ON A BEEFSTEAK

And Also on Overstrong Tea and Even on Cold Water.

According to a house surgeon in a London hospital, it is not necessary to take strong drink at all in order to be drunk. Cases have been known in which patients have got drunk on a beefsteak after having been for many weeks on a very light diet. The intoxication in these cases showed itself in a slight dizziness and drowsiness and indistinctness of speech.

Similar cases have been known in which the only intoxicant has been strong tea. In fact, there are instances in medical books of exceptional people in whom the constant use of overstrong, overdrawn tea has brought about distinct symptoms of delirium tremens.

Perhaps the most curious sort of intoxication on record is that in which the only intoxicant is cold water dripping from a water tap into the ear. In Germany a few years ago quite a number of morbid people had a craving for this curious way of inducing drunkenness, but it seems to have been stamped out.

The drip of the water is said to cause a painful boiling sensation at first and then to cause a pleasant drowsiness, ending in deep sleep. When the victim is roused he is dull and stupid in manner, like a heavy drinker. This craze makes its victim a nervous wreck in a very short time.—Pearson's Weekly.

RIDING THE SURF.

Riotous Sport In the Breakers That Lash the Coast of Hawaii.

"One of the novel pleasures in which most travelers indulge while in Honolulu is surf riding at Waikiki, near Diamond head," writes John Burroughs in the Century. "The sea, with a floor of lava and coral, is here shallow for a long distance out, and the surf comes in at intervals like a line of steeds cantering over a plain. We went out in our bathing suits in a long, heavy dugout, with a native oarsman in each end.

"When several hundred yards from shore we saw on looking seaward the long, shining billows coming, whereupon our oarsmen headed the canoe toward shore and plied their paddles with the utmost vigor, uttering simultaneously a curious, excited cry. In a moment the breaker caught us and, in some way holding us on its crest, shot us toward the shore like an arrow.

"The sensation is novel and thrilling. The foam flies; the waters leap about you. You are coasting on the sea, and you shout with delight and pray for the sensation to continue. But it is quickly over. The hurrying breaker slips from under you and leaves you in the trough, while it goes foaming on the shore. Then you turn about and row out from shore again and wait for another chance to be shot toward the land on the foaming crest of a great Pacific wave."

Turn to the Earth.

Son to whom the universe has become a blast furnace, a coke oven, a cinder strewn freight yard, to whom the history of all ages is a tragedy with the climax now to whom our democracy and our flag are but playthings of the hypocrite, turn to the soil, turn to the earth, your mother, and she will comfort you. Rest, be it ever so little, from your black broodings. Think with the farmer once more, as your fathers did. Revere with the farmer our centuries old rural civilization, however little it meets the city's trouble. Revere the rural customs that have their roots in the immemorial benefits of nature. There is perpetual balm in Gilead, and many city workmen shall turn to it and be healed. This by faith and a study of the signs, we proclaim!—Nicholas Vachel Lindsay in Farm and Fireside.

Practical Piety.

The goodly minister saw one of his parishioners running rapidly down the road, trying to keep in sight of a retreating form ahead.

"Ah," called the minister, "whither away, my brother?"

Seeing the race was lost anyway, the chaser stopped and pantingly replied:

"That confounded thief stole my coat!"

"Ah, and you were following the Scriptural admonition to give him your cloak also, were you?"

"No," said the parishioner frankly, "but I intended, if I caught him, to give him a belt!"—Judge.

Italy's Marriage Brokers.

In Italy marriage brokers are a regular institution. They have pocketbooks filled with the names of marriageable maidens in various ranks of life and go about trying to arrange matches. When they are successful they receive a commission, and very likely something extra as a voluntary gift from their customer.

Hood's Bit of Fun.

An English beer vender wrote over his shop door:

"Bear sold here."

Tom Hood, who saw it, said it was spelled right.

"The fluid the man sells," Hood explained, "is his own bruin."

BURNED BY COLD.

Liquid Air Will Produce a Worse Wound Than Intense Heat.

Whoever has applied a moistened finger to a piece of frosty metal in winter well remembers the painful experience thereby gained of the fact that cold as well as heat can blister the skin.

During some experiments in the production of excessively low temperatures Pictet, the French investigator, burned himself with cold several times, and the effects were so remarkable that he deemed them worthy of description to a body of scientific men.

It appears that there are two kinds or degrees of cold burn. In the case of the less severe "burns" the skin at first turns red, but becomes blue the next day. The inflamed spot swells, and a period varying from a month to six weeks elapses before the wound heals.

When the contact with the cold substance is longer and more complete a burn of the second degree is produced. A malignant and stubborn wound is formed, and the process of healing is very slow.

A drop of liquid air falling on Pictet's hand produced a cold burn which did not completely heal in six months, while a scorch from heat accidentally inflicted on the same hand and nearly at the same time was healed in ten or twelve days.—Harper's Weekly.

A DAINTY TABLE FEAT.

Victor Hugo's Wonderful Orange and Sugar Combination.

In "My Autobiography" Mme. Judith, the great French actress, tells a story of Victor Hugo.

At a dinner which Judith attended with Alexandre Dumas somebody quoted Alfred de Musset, and Hugo was led to express his opinion on his illustrious fellow author.

"Yes," he said, "he has immense talents. He even boasts that there are some who consider him as good a poet as I am."

Dumas jogged Judith's elbow, and it was all she could do to keep from laughing.

"At the end of the meal," our author relates, "Hugo treated us to a very strange exhibition. He put a whole orange, rind and all, into his mouth and then managed to thrust as many pieces of sugar as possible into his cheeks. This achieved, he began to scrunch it all up with his lips tightly closed. In the midst of this operation he swallowed two liqueur glasses of kirsch and a few minutes later opened his mouth wide. It was empty! No one made any attempt to imitate him, possibly because no one else had teeth good enough for such a feat."

One Way to Cook a Snipe.

"American cooking," said a foreign chef who visited this country, "pleases me very much. Your southern dishes I particularly like. The French chef, whom we find in the large hotel all over the world, would do well to adopt some of your dishes. He would do well, for example, to substitute 'chicken Maryland style' for such a dish as poached ortolan brains.

"Poached ortolan brains—no exaggeration," he said, "are of the sort of dishes a certain type of French chef loves to serve. Such a chef—the gourmet's chef—cooks fish that are not cleaned and birds so rare they seem not to be cooked at all. Indeed, these fellows have an axiom that the way to cook a snipe is:

"'Let it fly once through a hot kitchen.'"

English Literary Consuls.

If America is famous for its ambassadors who have been men of letters, England can boast of her literary consuls. G. P. R. James, probably the most prolific English novelist (except, perhaps, Miss Braddon), wrote three novels a year for about forty years and died in 1860 as consul general at Venice. Sir Richard Burton likewise wrote most of his travel books and translations of eastern works when consul in various parts of the world. At his last consulship at Trieste, which he held from 1872 to 1890, he succeeded Charles Lever, the Irish novelist, who had occupied the position for fifteen years. But is there a famous English literary consul at the present time?—Exchange.

TESTED HIS NERVE

A Blind Struggle For Life In the Depths of the Earth.

LOST IN THE DARK IN A MINE.

Thrilling Experience of a Workman Who Found Himself After an Explosion Alone and Without a Light in the Suffocating Coal Hole.

To be lost in the woods or on the plains is a fearful experience, but there the victim has the heavens above him and can at least see his way about. The terrors of a similar adventure in the utter blackness of a gas filled coal mine are thus described by a correspondent of the Youth's Companion:

I was working alone in a "room" on the second south entry of the mine. It was 5 o'clock, the time for firing the afternoon blasts. The man who was "driving" the entry lighted his fuse and came back through the entry calling out "Fire!" One after another the other miners set off their blasts and came along the entry until they reached my room. I lighted my fuse, watched it sputter for a moment and went out into the entry to wait for the blast.

Several seconds passed, and there was no explosion. My fellow miners passed out of the entry and left me alone. I went back into the room and found that the blast opening was clogged so that the fire could not reach the powder. I had to remove the tamping and recharge the drill hole. By this time the mine was filled with dense, gas laden powder smoke from the other blasts.

In the stifling smoke I recharged the hole, tamped it, inserted the fuse, lighted it from my head lamp and hurried to the mouth of the room. The work was hastily done. When the powder exploded the rush of air extinguished my lamp.

The darkness was absolute, and there is no darkness so dense as that of a mine. To my consternation I found the matches in my "jockey box" so damp that they would not ignite. Then I became really alarmed. I was two miles under ground without a light in an atmosphere so heavy with gas that it would not sustain life for any length of time.

I dashed into the entry, ran against a pillar and was knocked nearly senseless.

I staggered to my feet and groped down the tunnel. In a coal mine great oaken valves or doors close the entrances to the various tunnels. The air enters through the main entry and is sucked out of the mine by great fans at the opposite end of the mine after it has been distributed through the workings by means of these valves and crosscuts situated near them.

I reached a door, pulled it open and passed through. Beyond it two tunnels came together at a right angle. One led toward the open air, the other into the depths of the mine. My sense of direction was entirely gone, and I could not tell which to take. It was all chance. I went ahead and after a time reached another valve.

If I only had a light! One glimpse of the number painted on the door would tell me where I was. I tried to feel the number with my fingers, but in vain. I pushed through the door and entered another tunnel, down which I walked for hours, as it seemed. My head was bursting with pain from the gas.

Then I heard the sound of running water. I knelt down, dipped in my hand and found that I was going up stream and consequently deeper and deeper into the mine. So I turned back, reached the valve and felt along the pillar until I found the other tunnel opening. The gas had by this time begun to affect my brain, and I reeled and staggered as I walked. I left the track and walked in the "sump" water up to my knees, keeping one hand on the wall to steady myself.

I passed through valve after valve and tried to keep count, but my brain refused to perform that simple task. At last I pushed through a valve and felt a blast of fresh, cold air. With that breath of oxygen my reason returned. With renewed courage I pushed forward. Many times in following that life giving current of air I plunged through narrow cross cuts, stumbled over masses of slate, fell into water holes and bruised myself by striking against the sharp corners of the coal vein, but I was steadily creeping nearer to the surface.

Suddenly I stumbled against a loaded coal car. That meant that I was in the main entry, but how far from the entrance I could not tell. I worked my way along the string of loaded cars and began to ascend an incline. The fresh air swept down the tunnel in a gale. I kept peering ahead, in the hope of seeing daylight, but none appeared. I wondered why. I broke into a run, and in another minute I had emerged from the mine and stood gazing at the stars. It was almost midnight, and I had left my room shortly after 8 o'clock.

The Greedy One.

Traveling through South Africa, Mr. Dudley Kidd, the author of "The Essential Kaffir," once accused a native of being greedy. The native turned eyes of reproach upon him.

"Me greedy, baas?" he said. "It takes two Kaffirs to eat a sheep in a day, but only one Hottentot. Hottentot greedy, not Kaffir."

The question every morning is not how to do the gainful thing, but how to do the just thing.—John Ruskin.

Chief Charlie Marshall of the Fire Brigade has been seriously ill since Sunday with pleuro-pneumonia.

The weed inspector may be generous but is pledged to do his duty.

Nearly every Gleichenite had a good look at the famous Pelkey.

The regular town Council meeting for last Friday evening failed to materialize, as there were not sufficient members present to make up a quorum.

It is stated that private individuals will shortly erect a flour mill in Gleichen, but at present it is requested the names of those interested be withheld.

Considerable interest has lately been taken in the Gleichen cemeteries by private individuals with the result that several new fences have been erected and a couple of costly tombstones placed. In fact both the town and Catholic cemeteries now show vast improvements. There is a most commendable movement on foot to raise money for the general improvement of the cemetery, and it is understood that the Town Council is willing to take an active interest in this direction, under whose supervision all improvements must be made.

The body of the man found nearly two weeks ago above the S.A. L. Co.'s dam was temporarily buried after Coroner Rose had examined it Corporal Irvine took possession of all the papers, etc., found on the man, and sent them to the public administrator. It is stated that from the papers it is probable the deceased's name was Harry Cuthbertson, and efforts are being made to find his friends before permanent burial The CALL was telephoned by the President of the Calgary Iron Workers' Union, Sunday last, asking information as Union had obtained information that led to the belief that the deceased may have been a member of the Union, and if so he wanted to see that the funeral was arranged and full particulars given the Union. When and how the man came by his death is a mystery but as it is said there were no marks on the body that would indicate foul play it is believed his death was caused by drowning. It is even possible he may have floated all the way from Calgary.

A week ago Dr. Wainwright was joined by his wife and two children from Kamloops, B.C., and will make Gleichen their future home.

The business places of the town closed down at 3 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, the King's birthday, a large number of our citizens accompanying the local teams to Strathmore on the afternoon train, returning on the midnight. Both the Gleichen teams were victorious, the baseball players by a score of 9 to 8 and the football team with a score of 5 to 2.

It is really too bad that some persons will continue to take flowers from the cemetery and even destroy trees planted there. It may be done by children or others thoughtlessly, but it is safe to say that it will not be well for the person Chief Roberts catches at it.

Blairmore had a civic holiday May 28th to clean up the town and announce the work was well done. Children received $50 for gathering tin cans at 5c a sack and piled up some 60,000 cans during the day. It should not cost Gleichen this much, but what an improvement it would make to have a clean up day.
